

Don't Let Pain Hold Your Back This Year!

Health-related resolutions are a January staple. People resolve to get more exercise, lose weight, and eat healthier. But while everyone jokes about how those resolutions rarely last, few consider why people struggle to prioritize their health. In many cases, pain is a major contributing factor.

If you'd love to start moving more but find that persistent joint pain is holding you back, request an appointment at Ability Physiotherapy. Our team of physiotherapists can help you dig down to the root cause of your pain and find a solution to resolve it—which means you'll have an easier time putting that new gym membership to use!

What Are Some Common Sources of Joint Pain?

The underlying cause of musculoskeletal pain will vary from person to person. If the reason isn't immediately apparent, you may have a medical condition or recently suffered a repetitive use injury. Even if the cause is obvious—say, you recently underwent surgery—the process for actually resolving that pain may not be.

Our therapists will guide you through a comprehensive evaluation that looks at your health history and symptoms and includes several movement screens. Once we identify the source of your pain, we'll suggest a customized treatment plan.

Here are a few of the conditions we can help with:

- Osteoarthritis conditions
- Sports injuries
- Work-related injuries
- Back pain
- Neck pain
- Hip pain
- Chronic pain
- Pain in the extremities (knee, ankle, shoulder, wrist, etc.)
- Certain types of headaches
- And much more!

What Can I Expect During My Sessions?

Once we know what's causing your pain, we'll pull from several techniques to help you find relief. We aim to...

- Help you manage acute pain.
- Restore your range of motion and mobility.
- Strengthen the muscles around the affected area.
- Improve your overall movement and functionality.

To accomplish these goals, we might try the following approaches:

Manual Therapy: These hands-on techniques use the power of touch to reduce pain, promote blood circulation, and improve mobility. We often start sessions with manual therapy to prepare your body for more intense treatments.

Pain-Relieving Modalities: In some cases, we may suggest pain-relieving techniques such as hot or cold therapy, TENs, or other modalities.

Therapeutic Exercise: Most musculoskeletal conditions improve with movement and exercise. Unfortunately, pain keeps people from moving as they should. We'll develop a tailored exercise program that starts at your level and gradually builds intensity, ensuring you see results over time.

Functional Training: We can help you improve your balance, walking patterns, or any other day-to-day movements you might struggle with.

Education: Finally, we'll equip you with the tools you need to minimize pain in the future. That may mean helping you find an aerobic exercise routine that suits your interests and abilities, information about proper lifting techniques, or injury prevention strategies.

The most important thing to remember is that we always customize our treatment plans. We aim to find what works for you so you can live an active, healthy lifestyle—and maybe even meet those New Year's goals!
